IT ALWAYS SEEMED TO ME LIKE IT SHOULD BE GOOD FOR SOMETHING IN THE WINTER, TOO... WHEN THERE'S NO GRASS TO CUT
.. SO I MADE A FEW TEMPORARY CHANGES, LIKE BUILDING THIS SEAT OVER THE MOTOR WHERE IT GETS NICE AND WARM!
AND LIKE THESE SPIKE RIMS OVER THE REGULAR WHEELS ...AND CHANGING THE DRIVE PULLEYS SO I'LL BE GEARED FOR SPEED!
HMM... WELL, I SUPPOSE IF SOMEONE IS BACK HERE TO STEER IT...

The NEW CUSTOMER

Bang! Pop! Clackety-bang!

Bugs Bunny chugged his old car down the road towards Elmer Fudd's house. At each bang and bump, Bugs patted the steering wheel encouragingly. "Hang together, pal," he kept urging the ancient machine, "at least until I find out why that Elmer was so anxious to see me."

He brought the car to a shuddering stop in front of Elmer's house. "What in the world is going on?" he gasped, looking out the window. For a large crowd of people hovered about Elmer, who was handing out packages and pocketing coins as fast as he could reach for them.

"Gweetings, chum!" Elmer called out gaily. "Step wight up and see how a weal business man opewates!" With a flourish, he held up one of the packages. "Care to twy a bottle of my amazing Nerve Tonic?"

Bugs hooted. "I always knew you had plenty of nerve, but I certainly didn't think you could bottle it!"

Elmer chuckled. "You can't upset me, you jittery jackwabbit! The wemarkable ingwedients of my tonic make me immune to even your shenanigans. Besides," he confided behind his hand, "the money I'm making weally welaxes me! Tee, hee!"

"This is awful," Bugs fumed to himself, keeping a weather eye on Elmer, who continued to stuff bottles into paper sacks and pass them along to the clamoring crowd. "Old Fuddsy as a business tycoon will make my life miserable." He began to pace frantically. "Besides, if I ever saw a Nervous Nellie, Elmer's it." His eyes suddenly lighted up. "And I think I know how I can prove it!"

Very cautiously, Bugs reached for one of the paper bags and put it to his mouth. He blew and blew and blew until the sack was completely inflated. Then, carefully slipping around in back of Elmer, he waited until he saw another bottle of tonic raised high, then P-O-P! He banged the bag for all he was worth!

Elmer clawed the air wildly and caught the bottle inches from the ground. He then favored Bugs with a weak smile. "Bwavo, Bugs Bunny!" he called out loud enough for the whole crowd to hear. "You have demonstwated without a doubt that I'm as steady as a wock!"

Bugs let out an exasperated sigh. "Ah well," he shrugged, "if you can't lick 'em, join 'em!" He tapped Elmer on the arm. "You win, chum," he said finally. "It's just amazing to me how one man can handle so much business!" He blew on his nails. "If you could use the fruits of my long experience . . ."

"I weally could," Elmer admitted. "That's why I called you." He grinned. "Selling nerve tonic ought to be wight up your alley!"

"Let's not be obnoxious," Bugs murmured. "We have work to do."

No one noticed the tire on Bugs Bunny's car shiver ominously. Bugs had backed down close to the old machine in his excitement of selling the tonic. "Buy yours now," he urged the crowd. "You, too, can be as steady as a rock."

B-A-N-G! The car's tire exploded loudly. Bugs left the ground and returned to it almost instantly. Elmer gazed down at him and shook his head. "Well," he tittered with delight, "I may have lost a partner, but I sure made a new customer!"
